

Resource Guide for Owners of Small Poultry Flocks

R. Scott Beyer • Poultry Specialist

Many people are interested in raising small poultry or gamebird flocks for eggs, meat, hobbies, profit or 4-H projects. A small flock is usually inexpensive, requires little space and doesn't require much time. Raising a small flock is also a good way to introduce youth to food production and build a sense of responsibility.

However, as the commercial poultry industry has expanded and consolidated, small flock enthusiasts have had increasing difficulty locating reliable sources of chicks and supplies.

The following list of hatcheries and supply stores may not be all inclusive, but should be a good starting point for persons interested in producing poultry and gamebirds on a small scale. This resource guide has been made available to assist small flock owners with locating sources of chicks, waterfowl, gamebirds, peafowl, pigeons and places to purchase equipment supplies from Kansas producers and others.

Processing Equipment

Processing equipment for small flocks is becoming more difficult to locate. Also, the initial cost of new equipment may be too high to justify processing your own flock. However, some of the following companies still offer equipment to process poultry on a small scale:

Nasco (see previous listing)

Brower (see previous listing)

Val-A Chicago, Inc. (see previous listing)

Lyon Electric Company, Inc. (see previous listing)

Poultry Processors

There is only one packing plant in Kansas that will custom-process small flocks of companies under state inspection. If you have or will have birds to process, you should contact them well in advance to make reservations to have your birds processed. Other plants may process poultry, however, since they are not state inspected, this processing is done on a custom basis.

Egg Cartons

Many small flock owners are able to sell excess eggs directly to consumers and need egg cartons to package their product. For more information, see K-State Research and Extension publication MF-2307 Packing Eggs on the Farm for Direct Sales. Usually, the cost of purchasing custom printed cartons is too high to justify. It may be easier to purchase generic cartons that meet all labeling requirements then add a logo or farm name with an inexpensive ink stamp. Suppliers of egg cartons on a small scale include:

Lionel Industries (see previous listing)

Adelman Fisher Packaging, Inc.
